The Beads

We will ask all of the women attending the Ceremony to bring a bead that they feel represents you. They will present the bead to you, share what inspired them, and I will braid the bead into a necklace, bracelet, or strand for mom to hold during pregnancy and labor.

Spoken Words of Empowerment

You would be surprised how empowering it is when women gather around you and simply say "you can do it". That is what the spoken words are for. The women can either come with words prepared, or take time while we are there to write a few words to share in public or private with you. I will compile these words into a book for safe keeping and memories.

Laying of Hands

The power of physical touch can be moving. We will take some time in public or private prayer and gather around you, place our hands on you, and intercede for you. If the group is uncomfortable with a prayer, we can also read a spiritually driven poem or lyrics.

Fabric Banner

We will ask your guests to bring a strand of fabric or ribbon, tie it to a banner and share their inspiration. Many people use this banner as décor in their home or in the baby's nursery.

Remembrance Candles

All of the guests will take a unique candle home and when the news of labor or birth is shared, they will light their candle and send prayers and positive thoughts your way. So even if your closest friends are not with you physically, they will be with you symbolically.
